Meeting the Expanding Legal Needs of the Wine, Food & Beverage Industry

Companies in the wine, food and beverage industry operate in an extremely competitive environment and are under constant pressure to comply with new and evolving laws and regulations. The attorneys at Kaufman Dolowich understand these challenges and work with clients to develop individualized legal plans and strategies that help their businesses grow and succeed.

Kaufman Dolowich lawyers are recognized on a national and international level for their ability to meet the diverse demands of clients operating in the wine, food and beverage industry. Our attorneys think like business people and recognize the importance of understanding how our clients manage and run their companies. We take the time to personally get to know our clients and work one-on-one with them to find the right solutions to their most challenging legal issues. Lawyers at our firm keep also abreast of important legal developments that may impact our clients' operations and are active members of the California Restaurant Association.

Kaufman Dolowich offers a broad range of legal services to our wine, food and beverage industry clients. We try cases in state and federal courts across the country involving diverse legal issues and disputes, ranging from real estate and construction law matters, to shareholder and partnership conflicts, to insurance coverage matters and general liability claims. Our lawyers also represent employers in virtually all aspects of labor and employment law, from employment-related litigation, to collective bargaining and union arbitrations, to wage and hour compliance issues. In addition, we assist industry clients in developing corporate personnel practices and policies and offer training programs and other risk management services designed to help wine, food and beverage companies avoid high exposure legal claims and lawsuits.
