

Accountants and Actuaries

Accountant and Actuarial malpractice cases can be complex, and often require extensive investigations and early consultation with experts. That process can be streamlined when defense counsel is experienced in the unique language and challenges presented in an accounting or actuarial malpractice case.

Kaufman Dolowich represents accounting professionals in state and federal courts, before committees of professional organizations, and in regulatory proceedings. Kaufman Dolowich attorneys who focus on accountant malpractice defense have strong financial and economic backgrounds. They are adept at reading and understanding accounting and auditing documents and financial statements.

In today's rapidly-changing regulatory environment, our attorneys stay on top of the latest developments and are keenly attuned to the potential impacts of tax-code changes on the practice of accounting.