Meeting the Legal Needs of Clients in the Retail Industry

Companies in the retail industry operate in an extremely competitive environment that is highly dependent upon the health and growth of our economy. Laws and regulations governing retailers are also rapidly changing, requiring companies to consult experienced legal counsel who have a full understanding of this complex sector of the economy.

The attorneys at Kaufman Dolowich advise and represent companies throughout the retail industry, from brick-and-mortar stores to multi-national retail chains to e-commerce businesses. Founded over three decades ago, our firm offers retailers a team of highly experienced legal counsel focused on developing innovative strategies that help our clients achieve their short and long term business goals. Our lawyers are committed to establishing long-term relationships with businesses in the retail industry. We assist in the wide array of legal issues that arise within the retail industry including marketing, merchandising, cross-border transactions, commercial litigation, general liability, intellectual property, construction/surety, retail labor and employment, e-commerce, human resources, insurance, technology, and real estate.

At Kaufman Dolowich we recognize that retailers operating in the U.S. and around the globe face diverse and complex legal issues on a daily basis. Our firm is comprised of a team of over 200 attorneys practicing in a broad range of legal disciplines, from labor and employment to commercial litigation and general liability, to construction and real estate matters. Regardless of whether your company is struggling with a challenging employment law matter, involved in a high-stakes commercial dispute, or implementing policies aimed at preventing potential legal problems, Kaufman Dolowich provides integrated solutions to meet the needs of the retail industry.
