

Rachel Jacobson quoted in "One In Ten Small Businesses Found Employees Under The Influence," MainStreet

(April 27, 2014)

One in ten small businesses said they had employees arrive at work in 2013 while under the influence of at least one controlled substance, according to a new study by Employers Holdings, Inc.

The most common substances used by employees were alcohol, marijuana and prescription painkillers, said the business owners in the study conducted by Employers, the Reno, Nev. provider of workers' compensation insurance and services for small businesses...